WHERE WAR STILL RAGED.

Something for the Correspondents to Do When Nations Were at Peace.

Even at the early dawn of Utopian civilization it became evident that the era of universal peace had arrived, says the New York Sun. The nations discovered that the great gun had been invented that would send a projectile through any armor, while, on the other hand, the armor had been invented that would resist the attack of any gun. The submarine boat had been tested that would destroy any battleship, that is, if not caught by the submarine destroyer, which in its turn might succumb to the submarine destroyer.

Quite naturally this deplorable condition of worldwide peace frightened the Animagated Conclave of War Correspondents, whose members found their occupation gone. Accordingly at a meeting the president arose and presented a resolution for disarmament.

"There are no more conflicts. Cruelty and carnage is a thing of the past. We might as well go into other professions," he said.

Just then Richard Chefoo O'Diggins arose and objected in a speech that proved war correspondents to be still necessary. "No carnage, no conflicts," he roared. "Why, the editors can still send us to write up woman's suffrage meetings, college hazing and the Brooklyn bridge crash at six."

The climate of Citronelle, particularly during March, is ideal, and this is an opportunity for people residing in the Northern States to get away from the disagreeable March weather and attend the greatest Chautauqua ever held in the South. COULDN'T LIFT TEN POUNDS.

Doan's Kidney Pills Brought Strength and Health to the Sufferer, Making Him Feel Twenty-Five Years Younger.

J. B. Corton, farmer and lumberman, of Depue, N. C., says: "I suffered for years with my back. It was so bad that I could not walk any distance nor ride in an easy buggy. I do not believe I could have raised ten pounds of weight from the ground, the pain was so severe. This was my condition when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly relieved me and now I am never troubled as I was. My back is strong and I can walk or ride a long distance and feel just as strong as I did twenty-five years ago. I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have given a supply of the remedy to some of my neighbors, and they have also found good results. If you can sift anything from this rambling note that will be of any service to you, or to any one suffering from kidney trouble you are at liberty to do so."

NOT TOO IMITATIVE

GIRLS SHOULD NOT TRY TO APE ANOTHER.

Tricks of Manner and Dress of Social Leaders Much Imitated—"Shocking" Exploit of One Imitative Girl

"What Is Becoming to One May Not Be to Another"—A Club Girl's Mistake—One's Individuality to Be Cultivated.

BY KATE UPSON CLARK.
(Author of "Bringing Up Boys," etc.; president of the Wheaton Club, New York.)
(Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

In nearly every large town there are likely to be different "sets" of young people, and each of these "sets" is generally called by the name of some young man or woman, who is the leading spirit in it. It will often be found that the tricks of manner and dress which distinguish this leading spirit become characteristic also of some of the humbler members of the circle.

Nearly everyone can recall amusing instances of this sort of thing. Sometimes, especially if the morale of the leading spirit is not what it should be, such imitateness becomes pitiful.

In a certain town some years ago, the most beautiful and interesting girl was a Miss Hobart. She was slight and dainty in figure, was always dressed in perfect taste, read much and formed her own opinions and soon became a sort of model for all her companions.

Now Alice Hobart could yawn, and could even stretch out her pretty arms in company, and do various other things which are not generally permitted in good society. She would occasionally do such things when she was carried away with an absorbing subject of conversation, or in the excitement of a game. Everybody knew that she was unconscious of what she did, and she did everything so gracefully that these unconventional ways, which in others would be offensive, were in her perfectly fascinating.

One evening, a certain mother in this town was horrified to see her daughter, who was an inseparable companion of Alice Hobart, stretch out her feet in the presence of several young men, raise her arms above her head, and yawn broadly. As this young woman was five feet ten in height, and weighed 170 pounds, it may be imagined that the effect of this singular performance was almost frightful. It was certainly shocking, and the mother, in the expressive slang of the day, nearly "fell over" at the sight.

As soon as the visitors had left, the distracted parent burst forth: "My dear! Did you know that you stretched out your feet and yawned in the most dreadful way?"

"Well, I should think I did!" replied the girl, who was as cross as most of us are when we know that we have done something mortifying, but hate to admit it. "I wish you wouldn't give me another such a look as that, mother, when people are here. One would think that I was six, instead of 20."

"Your conduct might lead anyone to infer that," sighed her mother. "I hope you will never again do such a thing as that in company—nor anywhere but in the seclusion of your own room. It is most unbecoming."

"Alice Hobart does it often."

"I know she does—but a tiny, bewitching little thing like her can do many things which a tall girl like you cannot. Never try to imitate the personal peculiarities of others. What is becoming to one may not be to another."

This is a truth which cannot be too strongly emphasized. How many times have you seen a girl of prominence appear on the street upon her return from Europe or from some center of fashion, with a hat of strange and startling style—and then have you not seen a dozen or more of her mates coming out later with an imitation of this queer hat—to the eminent disadvantage of several of them! One might almost say that the moment anybody tries to be somebody else than her own natural self, that moment her influence is gone. Some great writer has said: "Imitation is suicide."

This was strikingly illustrated in a girls' club not long ago. One of the most popular speakers in this club was a plain, sincere girl, whose mode of thought and mode of speech were so palpably and delightfully her own, that it had not occurred to anybody to try to copy her manner. Unless one could think in just the same way that Phebe Marsh did, it would be ridiculous to try to speak so—or, just as in the comic opera the punishment was made to fit the crime, so in the organism of a human being, the mode of speech is generally especially adapted to the thoughts which are to be uttered.

Suddenly a new member was admitted, who like all the rest, developed a strong admiration for Phebe Marsh.

"Isn't she great!" she exclaimed in surprise. "I never heard anybody talk like her. Isn't she bright, and isn't she original!"

But what was the dismay of the club to find that this young woman, after having recognized and admitted

Telephone Kierchies.

The French telephone service has just accorded to the public one of those little amenities of civilization which might, with obvious advantage, be extended throughout the world. In every public office there will henceforward be hung a white linen handkerchief, treated with a chemical solution, with which every person can cleanse and disinfect the plate or tube before using it. If he will only do so also after breathing into it himself for several minutes, so much the better. These handkerchiefs are renewed daily.—London Globe.

Demand for Machines.

Because of the enlistment of large numbers of Japanese workmen in the armies operating in Manchuria, many women are forced to sustain themselves by means of industrial work in their homes. This has created a large demand for the lighter kind of machines which produce salable commodities and can be manipulated by women. Sewing machines, knitting machines and hand looms are reported to be in great demand.

Dog-Watch.

Dog-watch is a corruption of dog-watch, and is the name given to two short watches of two hours each on ship-board—one from four to six p. m. and the other from six to eight p. m. The dog-watches were introduced to prevent the same men from always keeping watch at the same hours of the day; hence on these occasions the sailors are said to dodge the routine, or to be doing dog-watch.—Boston Globe.

Poisonous Fish.

In the rivers of some of the West Indian islands there abound fish which it would be deadly poison for Europeans to eat, but which natives find a nourishing and enjoyable diet. In parts of New Zealand there grows a sort of orange which no one but a native can eat without becoming very ill, while two would probably poison the average European.

Corn in the South.

The Southern Farm Magazine says that the aggregate production of corn in the south for the last two years has been 1,300,000,000 bushels against 908,000,000 bushels for the two preceding years, or a total increase in the last two years of nearly 400,000,000 bushels.
